THEY NEVER FAIL

That is What They Say About Them in Norway, and It Is Therefore, Reliable.

Another proof, more evidence, Norway testimony to swell the long list of local people who endorse the old Quaker remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this convincing endorsement of that remarkable preparation.

Mrs. Julian Brown, Danforth St., Norway, Me., says: "I suffered from rheumatism for more than five years. I was treated by physicians and I took a great many remedies in an effort to find relief, but to no avail. About three months ago I was reading the testimonials given by different persons who had used Doan's Kidney Pills and I decided to give them a trial. I procured a supply at Stone's drug store and I am now using my sixth box. Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me what no other treatment or remedy had previously accomplished, and I feel that it will only be a short time before I am entirely cured. I cannot recommend this excellent preparation too highly."

Memorial Day.

A. S. W., '63, '10.

My heart is with you, brother, darling, lying in unbroken lonely grave, Where the Magalloway is pouring its strong, resistless waves. Not near you, the sound of marching feet, Not near you, the sound of glory's greeting, Around the grave and our country there, As one among her patriot dead, Birds and waves sing requiems for thee, O to heap your grave with blossoms As in the many graves gone by, Only comfort left for sorrow, Until side by side we lie.

An Automobile Sleigh.

Oscar J. Tubbs Perfects Plans That Have Been Patented.

A graduate of Colby college in last year's class, Oscar J. Tubbs, who is a Norway boy, son of C. N. Tubbs, has invented a scheme for an automobile sleigh that looks exceedingly good. Mr. Tubbs was granted a patent on his idea in May and is looking for an opportunity to either dispose of his patent by purchase or to let some manufacturer carry out his plans. M. E. Young, a classmate at Colby, is associated with him and has assisted in the financing necessary to secure a patent.

Mr. Tubbs' idea of an automobile sleigh is very similar to those that have been gotten up by countless inventors. Many schemes have been concocted to propel a vehicle on runners by means of a wheel or wheels underneath the body, the spokes digging into the snow or ice and sending the carriage along. Mr. Tubbs' idea has this principle with important improvements.

Drawings of the idea show that a body of an ordinary automobile has been placed on runners. Behind each rear runner is a digger wheel, containing long steel spokes, sharp at the extremity so as to bite into the ground. Each digger wheel is controlled independently of the other by a main driving shaft. The digger wheels are in an adjustable bar hung from the sleigh from protecting brackets and with a tension spring on these brackets a lever system is worked controlled by foot power from the seat.

The advantage of Mr. Tubbs' scheme is very great over the usual grooved wheel on runners. By application of the foot lever, either propelling wheel can be sunk as deep as the hub below the other wheel. Should bare ground be encountered, application of the power on both sides would lift the runners high from the ground and allow the wheels to bear the weight, to be lowered again when the ground was favorable for the runners.

Should a drift be encountered on one side of the road, the digger wheel on that side could be sent through the drift to catch solid foundations, while the other side would remain as usual, giving equal propelling power on both sides. The same thing could be used in slush, or where a deeper purchase was required.

Mr. Tubbs' idea has been worked out with great ingenuity. He planned it all during the last two years he attended college. He is certain that any machine built according to his idea could be sent along any kind of road in the winter time at a fast rate. He has shown his plans to many practical machinists and builders and all have declared it to be good and worth following up.

Mr. Tubbs' attorneys are getting ready to publish the invention in the Scientific American and to interest manufacturers in it.

Children's Table Manners.

"After a long illness in the hospital, I returned home to find that my children's table manners had suffered a complete demoralization," says the Woman's Home Companion for June. "They gobbled, used knife and fork indiscriminately, and always awkwardly, regarding their spoons as shovels, and, in short, were perfect little savages."

"In order to remedy this quickly, I started a series of 'company luncheons' at which I was the hostess and the children the guests. I set the table as prettily as possible, and made funny little place cards. The children played up delightedly, took grown-up names, and even washed their hands without a murmur. We made a set of simple rules. It was all good fun, and my four youngsters can now go anywhere and eat anything, and mother has the proud consciousness that they will always appear to good advantage."

How, with sadness, memory wakes of those bitter, waiting days, For a word or heart's strength From the field and war's dark ways. Few the comrades, old and feeble, How can I think of these as one? When in the dawning of young manhood You felt the sword to be lightly won. But the price, hearts still feel it, 'Tis sad to see the old man grow, And the waves sing requiems for thee, When blood bought with our own. May 30, '10.

Lilacs.

The polecat stalks by the light of the moon; Gay song birds notes ring o'er the sea; And Nature is clad, this month of June, In the soft and airy blue of the lilacs.

A lilac tree grows by the gate, The scent wafts in on the soft spring breeze; 'Tis the lilac, the lilac, the lilac, The lilac, the lilac, the lilac, the lilac.

The bullfrogs croak where the rushes grow; The lilacs are in bloom, a sad-saden time; The lilac tree grows by the gate, The lilac, the lilac, the lilac, the lilac.

The lilac tree grows by the gate, The lilac, the lilac, the lilac, the lilac; The lilac tree grows by the gate, The lilac, the lilac, the lilac, the lilac.

Frozen Out.

Down from Boston comes the word that the cold weather has killed millions of brown caterpillars.
According to the insect experts of Maine, the cold weather has not yet had any appreciable effect on the brown tails in this section, but there is something else that is doing the work much more effectively and extensively. This is the fungus disease. Maine people have not been informed of this to any extent, but during the past three years the agricultural department of the State has been quietly at work and has done a good deal toward exterminating the pests besides cutting down the nests.
"Three years ago," said Maj. E. E. Philbrook in charge of the insect work of western Maine, "we secured some spores of the fungus disease and planted them around Kittery and Wells and other sections where the moths have been thickest. During the first two years, little was noticed from them in the way of results.
"But this year, owing to the continual wet weather, the spores have grown and burst and countless hundreds of the brown tails have been inoculated. In going through Wells and Kittery and York I have seen big bunches of the caterpillars hanging to the trees, killed by the fungus disease. If we could have wet spring every year the moths would be soon stamped out.
"Brown tails are ten days earlier in coming out this year than they have been before. They are now about two-thirds grown and are about the foliage. Usual conditions are reversed for the foliage is ahead of the caterpillars."

Glimpses in the Past.

Aaron Paige has a book that the children used to read their first lessons at school in nearly one hundred years ago. It was called "The Young Scholar's First Book, or a Guide to Knowledge." It was published at the Oxford Book store and printed by Asa Barton in 1825. It was a small booklet of 33 pages, with paper covers.

Mr. Paige has an American Anti-Slavery Almanac for 1840. This was saved because this year was the year of his birth, and it was the custom to save a newspaper or an almanac, or something of the kind published the year a child was born. It is probably illustrated with the worst features of slavery and is well calculated to give one the "cold shivers" to look at it.

A Norway ADVERTISER published Sept 5, 1845, Vol. II, number 22, by Ira Berry, was a five column folio. Another ADVERTISER of Oct. 24, 1850, Vol. VII, number 25 was published by Mark E. Daniel, over J. H. Merrill's store. This is a six column folio. J. H. Badcroft is the name written on the margin of the papers. Both the papers were well printed and well edited, and contained a goodly amount of advertising.

Knew Little, People Knew Less.

How One Theatrical Manager Explained the Prosperity of Another.

H. Price Webber, who has been a manager in New England for 35 years and is the dean of the circuit, was in Boston the other day, and was telling some of his experiences in the country with Boston Comedy Company. In the course of his talk he said:

"Some years ago I was standing at Foxcroft Junction, Me., when the train on the Maine Central Railroad from Dexter and Newport came in, and a man came to me and said: 'Your name is Price Webber?'"

"I said it was."

"Well," he said, 'I have heard of you. I have a company of first-class New York dramatic artists and we are going up over the Canadian Pacific Railroad into the Province of Quebec. I find in writing for time in the different towns and cities on the route that you are booked pretty close to the dates I have, and I thought it my duty in a professional way to tell you that you had better not be so close to me. I have undoubtedly a good deal better company than you have, and, as I have been told you are a pretty decent sort of fellow, I want to impress on your mind you had better change your dates so that the comparison between your performance and mine will not obtrude too closely to the public, to your disadvantage.'"

"Well," I replied, 'I can hardly change now, as I have been going over the route for some years and they will expect me to keep my bookings.'"

"Very well," said he, 'but I don't want to do you up. Therefore I am giving you this chance to change and put, say, six months between us. I have certainly got the goods and it will be bad for you to come so close to me.'"

"I asked him what plays he was going to perform. He said:

"We are going to play 'The Lady of Lyons,' 'Don Caesar de Bazan,' 'Ruy Blas' and 'Leah the Forsaken.'"

"I remarked that these were good plays and might prove drawing cards."

"Drawing cards!" exclaimed he. 'Why, my boy, we will pulverize the public. When they see us they will sit up and take notice. We have got an elegant wardrobe and a company of actors or actresses has never been approached, and you had better realize the fact that you are a back number, and withdraw. You have been good in your day, no doubt; but we are the real thing, and don't you forget it.'"

"I told him I would have to take my chances, and that I could not do as he asked me for if I did, the next time I wanted to book the managers of the halls and opera houses would be apt to think I was liable to cancel again and consequently I would have to keep faith with them now."

"All right," he replied; 'do as you want to; but remember, I have told you what you are up against. I am sorry, but we will have to do you up, as we are the real Simon-Pure article, and after we are up you will not be in it.'"

"He went off on the train, and I pursued the even tenor of my way. About five or six weeks afterwards I was at West Farnham, P. Q., and when the Bedford train drew in at the station, I should come up but my former acquaintance."

"Hello!" said he; 'how are you getting on?'"

"Oh," I said, 'I get a dollar occasionally. How are you doing?'"

"Nothing," said he, 'absolutely starving.'"

"Why," said I, 'what is the reason you are doing so badly?'"

"Twenty-five years ahead of time. My pieces are too rich for their blood. They ain't educated up to my standard. I am sowing so that somebody else will reap.'"

"I said it was hard lines for him, and I was really sorry to hear his business was not good."

"He said: 'Can you help us to Boston? I have got a fine lot of costumes, and I don't want to have them grabbed for a 10 board bill. When I get to Boston, I can get enough money to see me to New York. Will you help me?'"

"I went into the station and got him tickets for himself and company, and he got his checks changed on his baggage."

"So you say you are doing well," he remarked.

"I told him I was not making a fortune in a night, but still did not have to complain for lack of patronage."

"He got on board his train, and, as he stood on the platform of the car, he said: 'I understand how it is you do so well—I have studied the thing out, and I know just exactly how it is.'"

"Please tell me your reason," I said.

"I would very much like to know."

"Well," said he, 'the reason why you do so well is just this: You don't know much, and the people who come to see you know a good deal less than you!'"

"I thanked him, and this was the last I ever saw or heard of him."—Boston Transcript.

Read what a Kansas woman says:

"I want to praise Mi-o-na stomach tablets, for I had been doctoring for over a year for stomach trouble and found nothing that did me as much good as Mi-o-na does. I only have the second box and it has relieved all pain in my stomach. It has relieved all pain from stomach, trouble or indigestion. Mi-o-na can't be beaten. You can use my name for Mi-o-na has done a world of good for me when doctors failed."—Mrs. Cordelia B. Mann, 207 E. 11th St., Junction City, Kan., Nov. 1, 1909.

Mi-o-na stomach tablets are sold by druggists everywhere and by Frank Kimball, proprietor of the Noyes Drug Store, for 50 cents a large box. Test samples free from Booth's Mi-o-na, Buffalo, N. Y.

What a Great Man Said to the Great American People.

Parisian Sage is a discovery of a celebrated scientist, who spent the best years of his life perfecting this great hair-tonic.

In giving his recipe to the American people he said: "Parisian Sage is the most delightful hair dressing in the world. It cures dandruff by killing the germs that infest the roots of the hair; it stops falling hair; it gives vigor and strength to the hair roots." Frank Kimball, proprietor of the Noyes Drug Store, sells Parisian Sage at 50 cents a large bottle and guarantees it to do all that is claimed for it, or your money is refunded. It stops falling hair, dandruff and itching scalp in two weeks. 22&24

Why Take Alcohol?

Are you thin, pale, easily tired, lack your usual vigor and strength? Then your digestion must be poor, your blood thin, your nerves weak. You need a tonic and alternative. You need Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only Sarsaparilla entirely free from alcohol. We believe your doctor would endorse these statements, or we would not make them. Ask him and find out. Follow his advice. J.C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

The endorsement of your doctor will certainly greatly increase your confidence in Ayer's Pills as a family laxative. Liver pills. Ask your doctor about them.

RATIONS ON THE FARM.

Principle Upon Which Regulated Stock Provender Is Based.

The farmer reads a great deal about feeding rations, much of which is all Greek. He is apt to class it among the "scientific talk" that does not directly appeal to his needed knowledge. This is a mistake. The agricultural colleges go deep into the matter and unearth truths that will greatly assist the farmer to reap a lot of good.

A little plain talk about what these rations mean may be of great worth to those who keep stock.

It is to be admitted that much is said in the agricultural journals on this subject that is not practical, but yet the application of a few primary principles to feeding suggests the way that practical feeds are doing things.

There are five classes of materials in feeding stuffs—viz, protein, carbonyl, drates, oil or fat, minerals and water. The mission of protein is to produce lean meats in the body, make blood, build up new tissues, etc. By carbonyl, drates is meant the starchy materials which give heat, fat and energy. They represent simply that part of hay, corn, potatoes and bread that goes to keep the body warm, produce energy for work and fat where the animal enlarges.

Cotton seed has a good deal of fat oil, while corn has a moderate amount. The latter constituent, like starch, will also furnish heat, energy and fat, and being more concentrated than the starchy materials, will afford more than twice as much heat, fat or energy as will an equal amount of starch or sugar.

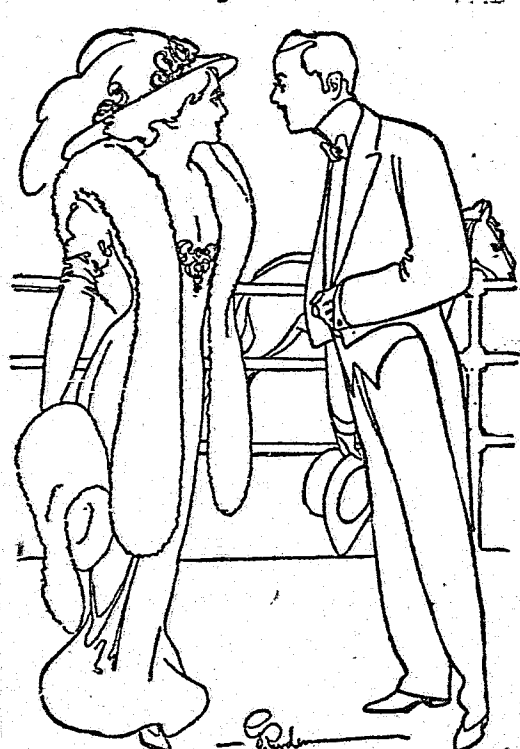

Mineral substances make teeth and bones and to a certain extent contribute to muscle and flesh. Professor Burkett of the Kansas experiment station says we take the bran from the wheat and give it to our cattle and pigs, giving only the soft white part of the wheat to our children, which is lacking in mineral materials. This is often the way with a good deal of our food. That explains why our children often have poor teeth and weak bones.

Plain common water is an important ingredient in foodstuffs. People must have protein for bone, muscle and blood. They must have starchy materials and fat to keep the body warm, to create energy and to make fat.

In corn alone there would not be sufficient protein to supply the wants of the body. To add timothy hay, for instance, to corn, as is so often done in feeding work horses, there would still be a lack of protein; as there is very little protein in timothy. But if, instead of feeding all corn, a few pounds of bran or cottonseed meal or linseed oil meal would be added, then you would more correctly balance the ration, supplying the protein.

The above ration is merely given to explain the point. That it can be improved upon there is no question. The secret in feeding, therefore, is to furnish the necessary ingredients in the proper proportion. When you feed corn, cottonseed meal, alfalfa, and clover, hay or the mixed ration you are supplying necessary materials for growth, maintenance and fat production.

A Dangerous Place.

Mrs. Smyth—Why don't you take your wife to the horse show? It doesn't cost much.
Mr. Swift—Doesn't it? The last time I took her there she picked out the finest gown she could find and made me buy her one just like it.

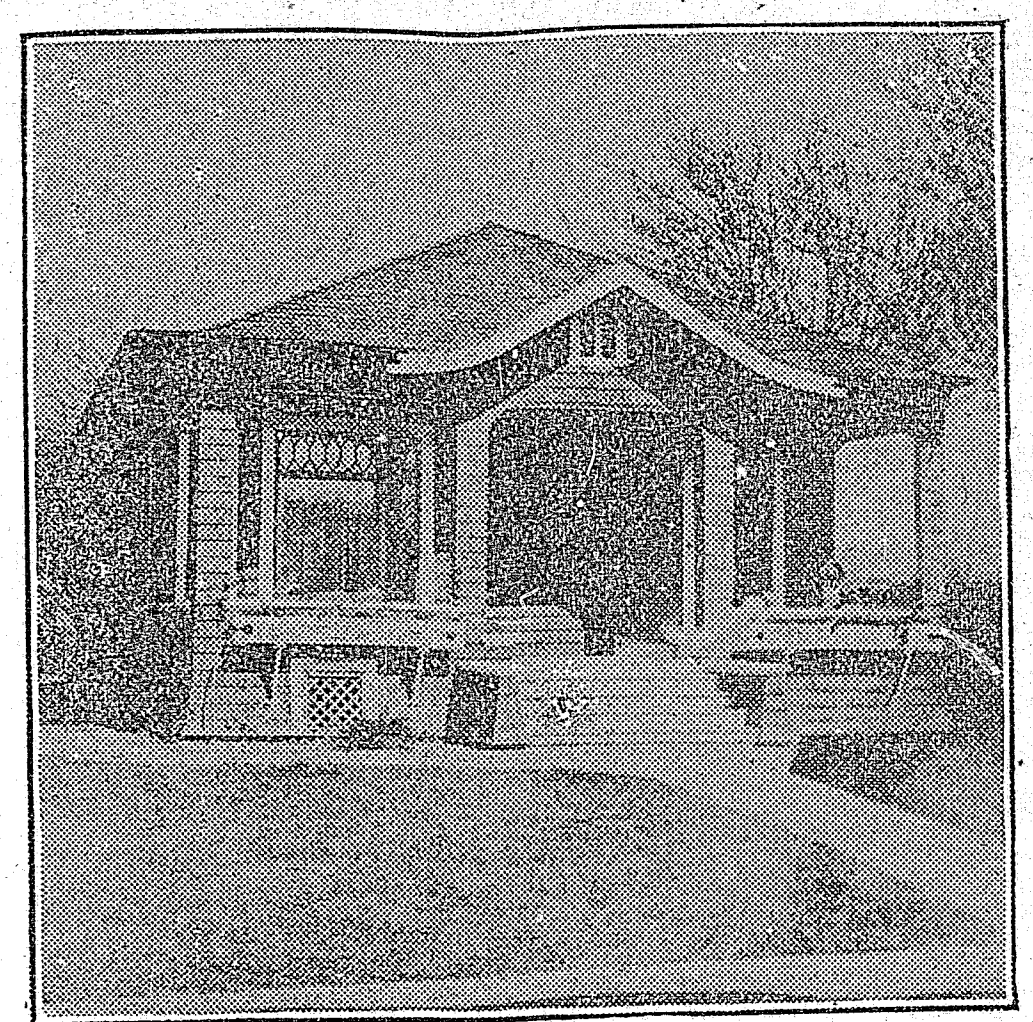

A Good Explanation.

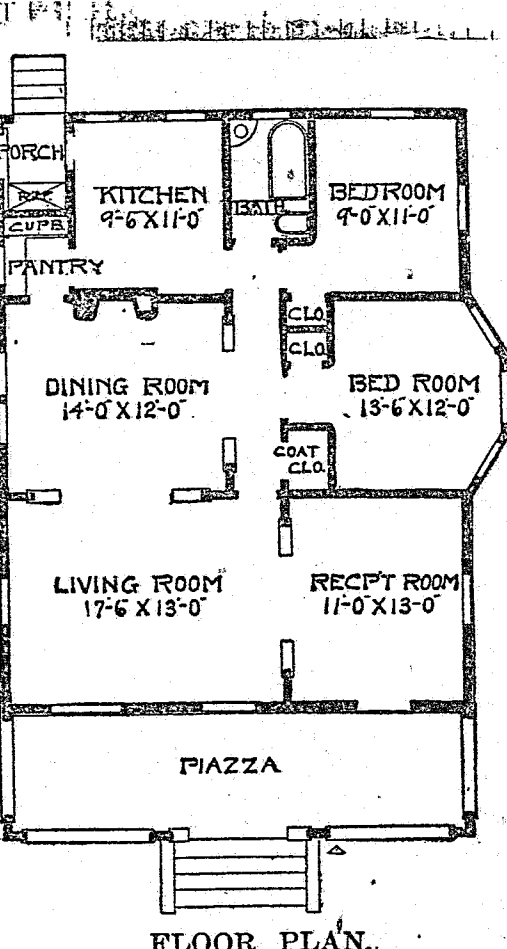

Father—But, do tell me, Alfred, how could you tell again?
Son—Well, you see, we had another examination.

CARAVANNING BY CAR.

The Latest Motor Fad Comes From England.

The motor caravan seen in the illustration shows a novel English method of carrying one's house about the country when on a motor tour. Many motorists must have felt the heavy drain on the pocket when touring, the supper, bed and breakfast bills of the country hotel more especially making a very serious item in the expenditure. This way of combining the car with a light caravan outfit not only does away with many hotel bills, but adds greatly to the enjoyment of the trip. Many beautiful spots can be thus visited for a shorter or longer period and the tour extended indefinitely at only the running cost of the car and food, the latter being carried in a small item if a motor caravan. The car illustrated is a two seater with a box behind, into which all the caravan part stows. The top of the box forms a platform for one's personal belongings, so if the weather is bad one can retire to a hotel if desired and the bags be lifted off the car without disturbing any of the caravan outfit. When erected (an operation which can be performed in about twenty minutes) the car has quite a formidable appearance, the width across being over seven feet, with five feet six inches headroom. However, it is lightly constructed and packs into quite a small space. The two bunks, one on each side, are made of canvas and extremely comfortable to sleep on, an air cushion being used as a pillow and eiderdown quilts taken for warmth, besides a blanket apiece. With such an outfit one can combine the simple life with a most enjoyable motor trip at a moderate expense.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

The majority of women in France are wage earners in one capacity or another. The average sum paid to dressmakers is 3 francs, or 60 cents, a day.
Mrs. Elizabeth Cochran Seaman, better known as Nelly Bly, the globe girder, is now the manager of the Iron-clad works of Brooklyn, a concern which employs many hands.
Mrs. Rosa Herrman is president of the H. Herrman Lumber and Furniture company, an American concern, which has branch offices in London, Hamburg and Natal. Mrs. Herrman lives in Stuyvesant square, New York.
Mrs. William Salter has been elected a member of the London county council. She is the wife of a physician who was derailed a few days ago for parliament. Mrs. Salter made a house to house canvass, and she credits her election to the support of women. She was opposed by two men, and she topped their combined vote. The chief plank in her platform were lower rents and lower taxes, two things which appealed especially to the women in the district she now will represent in the council.

Lady Duff-Gordon is a warm admirer of the American woman. This member of the British nobility claims that an American woman can keep a secret. She says that in America women are treated on equal terms with men. "They are better educated than Englishwomen, as a rule. There is no country where woman is treated with greater courtesy. The result is seen in the independence of character and the self reliance and dependability of the American woman."

How to Cook Meat.

The object of cooking meat is to make it tender and to keep in the juice and preserve the flavor. To do this sear the meat on both sides—that is, press it down quickly on a hot pan and then turn and sear the other side. When the meat turns a whitish brown color a coating has been formed which will keep in the juice. After searing the meat cook it slowly on a low fire. This will make it tender. Beef and mutton are the meats that are best for all persons.

Meats such as heart, liver, pork and kidney should never be given to young children or persons who are not well. Pork should be used only in cold weather and not frequently even then.

Lonely on the Farm.

One of the Effects of the Introduction of Agricultural Machinery.

Power has always lingered in ownership of the land. This has been some what obscured in America by the fact that there has been, during the infancy and youth of the republic, so much land and so few people. With the settlement of the country, however, we are approaching a time when the world conditions; the farmer in America is today more a person of consideration than ever before; the discerning may make out the beginnings of the development of a "landed gentry"—that is, if the phrase be taken too seriously. The increase of the farmer in substance and his rise in social and political consideration are among the most interesting signs of the times.

There is, however, a factor present here which is of the land-holding interest of a new country—machinery. The farmer of the old world increased in wealth and power by becoming a large employer of labor. As his possessions grew his household grew. The manor house clustered cottages whose occupants composed the farmer's working force. Large farming meant many people; the farmer became a manager of men.

A generation has changed all that. The farmer today is not an overlord of men; he is a mechanical engineer. No small houses rise near his own; but his machine shed grows larger and larger. He plows with gang plows; he reaps with "headers"; he has an expensive machine which he attaches behind his wagon which loads on it the hay from the meadow. Instead of the fields full of reapers, a single man drives a machine all day long around a square whose sides grow shorter with every round; there are machines to dig potatoes, to plant corn, to cut fodder—even to milk cows. Modern progress has banished companionship from the farmer's life; yes even companionship with his horse. When he wants to go to town today he gives the crank of his thirty-horse-power motor car a turn and lays hold of a lever and a wheel.

The effect of this is yet to be studied and ascertained. At this moment we may wonder just what he wants to come from this sharpening of the farmer's intellect in one direction, this disuse of his executive powers, this intensifying of the loneliness of the country by leaving the tiller of the soil during the working hours with no companion but a machine.

Hints for the Sick Room.

In the course of a life which has passed a fair number of chances for observation I have been much impressed by the ignorance of the average woman of how to manage in case of illness.

When disease strikes some one in her household she displays often a pitiable inability to take care of the patient in the simple ways that to one accustomed to sickness seems almost second nature.

Happy is the family in which illness has been so rare that its members have never had the opportunity to acquire experience of how to handle an invalid, but unhappy the invalid who happens to tumble into such a family!

When the patient again arises and goes about her daily life she will probably have a store of knowledge which will teach her how to take care of the next victim to sickness who comes her way.

But it is not necessary to have gone through an attack of illness to know how to meet it. Certain little matters should be learned by every woman, for she never knows when the emergency may arise which will make such knowledge a boom.

One of the first rules to be laid down concerning disease of any kind is to keep the patient away from the other members of the family.

CHICAGO MERCHANT MAKES STATEMENT.

After Spending Thousands of Dollars and Consulting the Most Eminent Physicians, He Was Desperate.

CHICAGO, ILLS.—Mr. J. G. Becker, of 134 Van Buren St., a well-known wholesale dry goods dealer, states as follows:

"I have had catarrh for more than thirty years. Have tried everything on earth and spent thousands of dollars for other medicines and with physicians, without getting any lasting relief, and can say to you that I have found Peruna the only remedy that has cured me permanently.

"Peruna has also cured my wife of catarrh. She always keeps it in the house for an attack of cold, which it invariably cures in a very short time."

Give Hens a Quiet Place.

During the time that hens are setting they should be placed in a quiet place, where they can neither see the other birds nor be seen by them. If they are where they are likely to be disturbed they do not set nearly so well, while it sometimes happens they may forsake the eggs altogether. It is a good plan to provide each broody hen with a separate box, a convenient size for this being 15 inches square and 15 or 18 inches high.

It is advantageous to have a fairly roomy box, as it can be ventilated more easily. The sides and top should be made of solid wood; if for use in the open the timber should be quite seven-eighths of an inch in thickness, but if to be placed in a shed, as generally happens, three eighths is really sufficient.

In the former instance the top should be made to slope, so that rain will run off easily, and not soak through to the hen within. Either the front or the top should be made in the form of a door; in the former case the hen could then walk off her nest for feeding, while in the latter instance she would have to be lifted off. There should be no bottom to a nest box and this for two reasons—the first, that it harbors dirt and vermin so, and the second, that it prevents sufficient moisture soaking up through the earth to the eggs. The difficulty can, of course, be obviated, but it entails a good deal of labor.

For Women Who Sew.

If the threads by which pillow cases should be marked for cutting are drawn the cases will not have the uneven side seam that makes them crooked.

A few paper clips are invaluable things to the sewing basket, for they may hold together scraps, bits of patterns and small pieces of lace.

Petticoats that fit straight around the hips can be turned over a quarter of an inch at the top and headed with a ribbon banding, through which a one-inch ribbon can be run to tie at the back or front.

The long shams, whether made of kerchiefs and put together with bands of linen, are less trouble to keep in position on the pillows than the old-fashioned shams of two pieces.

To even dress goods at one end fold the goods backward, bringing the selvages together at each side. Crease across, and there will be a straight line by which to cut.

It Was Greek to the Waiter.

Flashlights on the ups and downs of life are often thrown apparently by chance in the intercourse of social settlements. An Italian employed as a janitor in a settlement on the East Side was observed by one of the visiting managers as having a look and bearing much above the work of an ordinary laborer.

His face denoted keen intelligence, his speech was refined and his hands were those of a scholar. Upon inquiry she ascertained that this man was of good birth and education, and of faultless antecedents, but a succession of misfortunes had brought him to poverty in a strange land. He was bravely and honestly and thoroughly doing the work assigned him and it proved a stepping stone to tasks for which he was better fitted.

A student at Columbia University was living with his mother at one of the large hotels in New York. When preparing for an examination he often brought his books to the table and worked at Latin and Greek between the courses of his dinner. It happened one evening that he had considerable trouble over his Greek. The man who waited on the table saw his predicament and finally said quietly: "If you will let me come to you at such a time this evening I will be glad to help you over that translation." The boy was surprised; but eagerly reached for any aid in sight. It transpired that the waiter was a graduate of a European University, abundantly able to coach the puzzled student. —[Christian Herald.]

Sometimes a combination of two fruits serves the same end, as in preserving strawberries of second quality and raspberries that are apt to be a little flat in flavor when cooked; a few currants scalded and the juice added improves the berries wonderfully. Green grapes and tart apples are often used in combination with other fruit.

A danger to be avoided with grapes is the forming of grape-sugar crystals, which give the very unpleasant effect of a sprinkling with powdered glass. This objectionable evolution took place in some jars of rather over-ripe blackberries that were "improved" by the assistance of a small proportion of green grapes. Probably it taken when less mature, the grapes would have been free from this development, which is more common in eating ripe grapes than with green ones.

A summer class for library training will be held through the courtesy of the trustees at the University of Maine, Orono, Maine, July 8 to July 27.
